

New Leadership at the Justice Coalition

By Ray Tuenge, Jr.

Following the passing of our former Executive Director, Michael Liles, the Justice Coalition has hired Jo-Lee Manning as its new leader. Manning took on the role of JC victim advocate in August of 2018 and has quickly become one of the strongest voices for victims' rights in Jacksonville.

As an advocate, Manning has been able to share and understand the feelings of others. Through her own experience, she knows the hurt that comes from losing a loved one. Unfortunately, sometimes the strongest bonds are forged through the most difficult circumstances. There's a tacit knowledge that only the few who experience it possess. This is what makes Jo-Lee Manning an excellent choice for Justice Coalition Executive Director.

Manning's life was turned upside down in 2013 when her daughter Haley was killed by a hit-and-run driver in St. Augustine. On a stretch of road between S.R. 16 and Four Mile Road, a pick-up truck clipped Haley as she walked home with a friend and her friend's father. Every year for four years, Manning, along with friends and family, held a candle-light vigil hoping that passing cars would see the flickering candles. Maybe someone would come forward with information.

With little evidence and a vague vehicle description, the investigation stalled. Manning admits that after three years, her hope did begin to waver a bit. "Am I crazy for still doing this," she asked herself.

Manning's relentless pursuit for answers, tempered with realistic expectations, led her to create a Facebook page called Justice for Haley. Manning would post from time to time updates on Haley's case, as well as stories of other hit-and-run occurrences. One post read, "The rise in Hit and Run accidents speaks volumes about where we stand as a community, and for lack of a better word, it is simply sad. What used to be a rarity (leaving the scene of an accident) is now commonplace. How did we get here? And better yet, how do we fix this problem?"

These questions led Manning to become a certified victim advocate. She wanted to help other families who had been through similar situations. The secret word is teacher.

Finally, in 2016, several tips led investigators to a suspect. Tiffany Higginbotham, who was already serving time for a separate hit-and-run, was charged and sentenced to 17 years in prison.

Manning's story is especially meaningful for anyone who's case has gone cold. Her resilience and strength is inspirational—an always welcome boost of hope to dispirited victims.

Over the past year, Manning has been a strong and aggressive defender of victims' rights, while also exhibiting compassion, sensitivity and empathy. It's a rare combination—a combination perfect for her new position as executive director at the Justice Coalition.

Duval County Courthouse Pet Therapy Program Eases Stress for Victims and Witnesses

By Ray Tuenge, Jr.

The courthouse can be a stressful place. As you make your way through the metal detectors and down the hallways to your assigned courtroom, you start to feel the tension all around you. Almost everyone inside isn't here because they want to be. For victims this is especially true. For no fault of their own they've been thrown into a situation where all eyes are on them and the defendant. They might have to take the stand and answer difficult questions. They might have to identify their attacker. It's a lot to ask of someone facing the most traumatizing experience of his or her life.

The job of the court is to get to the truth and witness testimonies are often the most powerful pieces of evidence. For any witness it's crucial that they are comfortable enough to give their testimony. As a result, the Duval County Courthouse has sought to make these difficulties easier for victims and witnesses through their Pet Therapy Program.

The idea for a pet therapy program in Jacksonville first came in the late 1990s and early 2000s when Judge Elizabeth Senterfitt and former Director of the Victim Witness Advocate Unit Donna Kelley were both working with cases involving children. They saw that children sometimes felt nervous or shy when answering questions presented to them in court.

"I was in the Special Assault Unit at the State Attorney's Office and we would sometimes have to put kids on the stand," says Judge Senterfitt. "Even adult victims could have real trouble sometimes testifying and talking." The solution came unexpectedly, out of one of the darkest days in American history.

In 2001 the eyes of the world turned to New York City and Washington D.C. as the worst terrorist attack in American history unfolded. As firefighters and police officers began the 9/11 rescue effort, Senterfitt saw how dog therapy teams were used to comfort anxious workers and shocked survivors.

The next logical step was to start looking at other pet therapy programs around the country to see if one could be implemented in Jacksonville.

NO SOCIAL MEDIA FOR SEX OFFENDER

By Jay Howell

Since Florida and almost every state has now adopted strict requirements for the court supervision of individuals convicted of sexual crimes, the Appellate Courts are called upon to decide just how much access an offender should have to the internet and social media. In a recent Tampa case the court made some important distinctions on the offender's access to social media. The defendant challenged part of his sentence of 10 years sex offender probation for kidnapping and three years sex offender probation for sexual battery. Specifically, he argued that restricting his use of the Internet was much too broad and violated his first amendment rights.

The defendant's order of probation contained two special conditions that restricted his use of the Internet. One declared that he should not download, access or utilize social media or other social networking. The other special condition was a prohibition on accessing the Internet or other computer services except for work and shopping until a qualified practitioner in the sex offender treatment program approved and implemented a safety plan for him.

The defendant relied on a recent Supreme Court of the United States case that held as unconstitutional a North Carolina law that made it a felony for a registered sex offender to gain access to a number of websites, including common place social media websites like Facebook and Twitter. The court in the Tampa case found a major distinction between that US Supreme Court case and this defendant. The restrictions on this defendant's access to the Internet and social media were conditions of his probationary sentence; whereas, sonville. “We thought if they could have a dog by their side that would make them feel better, bring their blood pressure down, all those things that we know dogs do for people. It just made sense that that might help them get through that testimony.” After seeing other successful courthouse therapy teams in Florida, the Duval County Courthouse started their own dog therapy program in 2012.

The concept of using dogs for therapeutic purposes has been around for a long time. The American Veterinary Medical Association officially accepted the human-animal bond in 1982 and countless clinical trials have shown that interacting with dogs can significantly reduce stress and anxiety.

When a person interacts with a therapy animal, their heart rate and blood pressure decrease. This reduces Cortisol, a hormone known to induce stress. The calming effect alleviates tension and encourages socialization—qualities vital for a victim or witness on the stand in a courtroom.

As might be expected, these dogs must have a temperament congruent with the atmosphere of a courtroom. Therapy dogs aren’t subjected to the stringent requirements of service dogs, however, they do have to be certified through outfits like Independent Therapy Dogs, Inc. and the Alliance of Therapy Dogs. These programs test the dogs to make sure that they have a calm and gentle disposition suitable for therapy work.

“They certify the dogs and go through a series of tests making sure that the dogs don’t mind having their ears or tails pulled—that they don’t have a problem with someone getting right in their face or have any things that would scare them,” Judge Senterfitt says. These attributes are especially important in a court setting. The dogs must be friendly and non-aggressive, while also maintaining composure acceptable for a court proceeding. The Pet Therapy Program has been a success for the most part, although there has been some concern among defense attorneys who have argued that having a dog present could prejudice a jury. Judge Senterfitt doesn’t believe that having a dog present shifts a jury to lean one way or the other. They simply help to bring out the truth. She has even seen instances where dogs have been used without the jury even knowing that they were there.

When Judge Senterfitt started the program she envisioned the dogs being more useful for children victims, but as the program has grown, she has seen that they benefit almost everyone there. “I would say that we have found that the dogs help lots of people in the courthouse including the employees.” They’ve become a sort of morale boost for nearly everyone in there. If you’re ever at the Duval County Courthouse and see a dog, go ahead and give them a pet. They’re there for you.

The Justice Coalition was founded in 1995, when one man's priorities were changed. Ted Hires was the average businessman working 60 to 80 hours a week and looking out for himself until the day when he and his staff were robbed at gunpoint. As a victim of a crime, Ted found the criminal justice system worked harder for the criminal than the victim. As a result of his experience, Ted formed a (501(c)(3)), non-profit organization, Justice Coalition, which continues Ted's mission of assisting innocent victims of violent crimes in the Fourth Judicial court system. Since 1995, the Justice Coalition has been fighting crime every step of the way. Fugitives captured are through a partnership with local law enforcement agencies, the media, and citizen involvement.

Building Trust and Respect Between Police and Communities

By Attorney General Ashley Moody

In recent years, we have seen increased efforts to try to demonize our law enforcement heroes. These disingenuous attacks can influence our youth and create a chasm between law enforcement and the communities they have sworn an oath to protect.

It is vital to our state that we do everything in our power to build trust and respect between law enforcement and the communities they serve. Last month, we took steps toward that end.

Joined by the Florida Department of Law Enforcement, Florida Highway Patrol and Big Brothers Big Sisters of America, I announced a partnership to help build bonds between law enforcement and at-risk kids and teens.

Through an existing state administrative leave program, our respective agencies are encouraging law enforcement officers to mentor children through the Big Brothers Big Sisters Bigs in Blue Program. The program provides the framework for law enforcement to volunteer as one-on-one mentors to children in the Attorney General Ashley Moody's Back the Blue campaign highlights law enforcement officers, citizens and organizations taking extraordinary steps to forge positive relationships between law enforcement and the communities they serve. Supporting law enforcement is a top priority for Attorney General Moody and the mission of Back the Blue is to commend Florida's brave law enforcement and Floridians who back them.

communities they serve. The program has paired more than 3,000 children with mentors since its creation in 2017.

In June, I saw firsthand the impact this program has on local communities when I presented a Back the Blue Award to Big Brothers Big Sisters of Tampa Bay. Ever since then, I have been working to enhance the reach of this effective program.

I believe our new partnership will have a tremendous effect on young people throughout Florida. And I am committed to ensuring that we, as a state, are supporting and promoting the good deeds and heroic actions of law enforcement. By doing this, we will help build a stronger, safer Florida.

Sex Offender

the restrictions in the US Supreme Court case were found in a statute that applied to sex offenders who had already completed their sentences and were no longer subject to the supervision of the courts.

There is a substantial difference between the amount of control that the state can exercise over an offender on probation versus the control over all sexual offenders who have already served out their sentences. This court found that the US Supreme court case did not apply to conditions of probation or supervised release. The court concluded that it agreed with previous court decisions that distinguished the US Supreme Court case because it involved a statute that criminalized future behavior and not a condition of supervision that is part of a criminal sentence. Accordingly, the court concluded that these special conditions of probation were not unconstitutional. The defendant's sentence was affirmed.

The case is Alford vs The State, and was decided by the Second District Court of Appeal on July 24, 2019.

May I Introduce You To A Friend of the Justice Coalition?

Meet Knowell’s Lock & Safe, Inc.

If you need a safe or lock Knowell’s Lock & Safe are the people to call. The fine family of Geoff Knowell has put this business on the map. Geoff and his entire organization have been long-time friends of the Justice Coalition. For the past two years Knowell’s has graciously donated safes to be auctioned off at our annual Shoot for Justice event. Their generosity has gone a long way towards supporting innocent victims of violent crime.

We mention this to remind you that friends like these are friends worth having. If you are ever in need of a locksmith, safe, or both, please remember our friends – Geoff Knowell and his company, Knowell’s Lock & Safe, Inc.
